

SINGING THE LORD'S SONG IN A STRANGE LAND

The whole world is passing through a huge paradigm shift the likes of which have not been seen for generations. What is the Holy Spirit saying to the Churches in Britain and to the Methodist Church in particular? The author contends that Britain is a modern Babylon where mammon reigns. The Church has unconsciously absorbed the values of Babylon into its structures and strategies with the result that it has ceased to be prophetic. It has become a public utility offering cheap grace to a consumer public looking for peace and security in troubled times. Only after a radical repentance, at all levels of its life, can the Church recover its integrity and grow.

‘This book offers a highly readable account of the Church’s past history and theology in the context of the present and future. Written from a Methodist perspective and informed by the author’s wide experience across the denominations, its challenging analysis will be found widely applicable.’

Margaret Jones, Methodist minister and historian.

‘A prophetic wake-up call to British Methodism based on a clear, prayerful analysis of the problems we face. The hope-filled vision for the future lies in returning to prayerful repentance, the evangelical power of the Word of God, sacrificial service and, personal evangelism.’

Paul Wilson, Methodist minister, Development Worker, Methodist Evangelicals Together.

‘Even when I disagree with him, Tom Stuckey has interesting things to say. This book offers many challenges to 21st century Christians located (as Tom argues) in a modern Babylonian captivity where we seek to tame God and fail to grasp that the cross exposes the darker side of human progress’.

Dudley Coates, Past Vice-President of the Methodist Conference.

‘As ever Tom Stuckey brings a new perspective to our thinking about ecumenism and mission. Although written for Methodists what the author says about the Babylonian captivity of the Church in Britain is pertinent for Anglicans as well.’

Peter Hancock, Bishop of Bath and Wells.

‘Timely and real; a cri de coeur on the plight of today's Church gives us hope as we seek to survive and grow in our very own Babylonian exile.’

Bruce Thompson, Methodist minister, Chair of the Lincolnshire District.

To obtain this book email mail1@tomstuckey.me.uk. The author will request a £12.50 cheque made out to Tom Stuckey and details of your address. On receipt of your cheque he will post off the book.

RETURN TO BOOK PAGE